

Food, Faith and Ecology:

A Christian Call to Justice and Sustainability

Educator David Orr says our "alienation from the rest of the natural world is unprecedented." Our faith calls us to love life, and this just may be our greatest hope for healing the depth of our alienation. Our faith also calls us to act justly. To do so we will need to re-nestle our economy within God's creation. And, food -- food security, sustainable agriculture, local food -- is a particularly important way to do so.

Join us for a fun, engaging and interactive workshop!

Featuring Michael Schut

Hosted by: Minnesota Episcopal Environmental Stewardship Commission

When: March 20th, 9:00-12:00 Cost: $10 (includes lunch)

Where: The Cloister of the Cathedral of Our Merciful Savior

101 NW 6th Street, Faribault

Preregister for this event!

Contact Patricia Benson by email at bensongearth@aol.com

Or Tom Harries by phone at 952.297.5856

Michael Schut is the Economic and Environmental Affairs Officer for the Episcopal Church. Michael's recent book is Money and Faith: The Search for Enough. He also edited and co-wrote Simpler Living, Compassionate Life: A Christian Perspective, and the anthology and study guide Food and Faith: Justice, Joy and Daily Bread. He speaks and leads workshops/retreats around the country, connecting faith, justice, sustainable economics and care for all God's creation.